Understanding the Man - Understanding the World We have a pleasure to announce that I International Interdisciplinary Conference is organized by Institute of Psychology of Maria Curie-Skłodowska University, Lublin Scientific Society and Institute of Psychology of Szczecin University. The Conference Understanding the Man - Understanding the World will be held on 27-29 september 2011 in Lublin, Poland. Our aim is to stimulate discussion upon a role of the man in the contemporary world, and hence to come closer to explaining various forms of human activity. We entertain hope that the conference will contribute to the integration of scholars coming from various research centers, and it will enable the exchange of knowledge and experience that might result in nationwide as well as international cooperation. We also hope that the broad scope of topics will allow all to find their own sphere of interest. Therefore, representatives of various scientific disciplines: philosophy, psychology, political sciences, sociology, literary studies, culture studies, anthropology and education are cordially invited. List of proposed topics: Understanding development - includes life-span issues; Understanding distinctness - concerned with social acceptance of the disabled and social exclusion; Understanding social space - related to such topics as art, culture, and globalization; Understanding media - related to role of media and the impact of advertisement upon the social life; Understanding education - related to the problems of contemporary education at various dimensions; Understanding politics - related to mechanisms of the individual and group social interactions; Understanding sex - including sex differences, sexuality, and carnality; Understanding contemporary moral dilemmas - concerned with ethics of social sphere and an essence of humanity;

The following forms of presentation will be accepted: lecture, short report, poster You are cordially welcome at the conference venue.
